Chronicling the Summer Experience of our WCCCD -University of Michigan Student Science Research Participants

Noor El-moussaoui

"From the first day of orientation it has been very productive, interesting, and educational. Everything that was taught in a classroom is now applied on a large scale to a particular project. I have learned and am mastering pipetting skills, autoclaving, extracting serum, how to do SDS gels and how to make a 'Master Mix' aka QPCR mix."

Hou Long Mac

"I am currently working in Dr. Samuelson's lab where we focus on the gastrointestinal tract. Specifically on notch signaling and its effects on epithelial cells in the stomach and intestines. I am very lucky to work with very knowledgeable people in the lab, have my mentor, Nobu, a clinician and a postdoctoral fellow working from Japan and spend time with other summer fellows outside the lab.
