Celebrating Women's History Month ~ Promoting Women in the Trades!

Robbie Dunlop, WCCCD Graduate, started her new job with Schneider and is earning more than $62,000 annually.

"Doing it yourself is something I've been forced into for years. I haven't had a choice, always on the go to make it happen. I've worked for large corporations but no amount of money could make me enjoy it. I needed to create, to work with my hands, that is what compelled me. This program has empowered me so much as a mother of two little girls to flourish in what I love doing. Since completing my pre apprenticeship and utilizing new my skillset, I have taken multiple residential jobs renovating kitchens and bathrooms. I've started a home renovation business, a television mounting business, and have made over $5,000 within months of graduating. I'm grateful. Change your process, change your habits, change your life."

District Police Authority

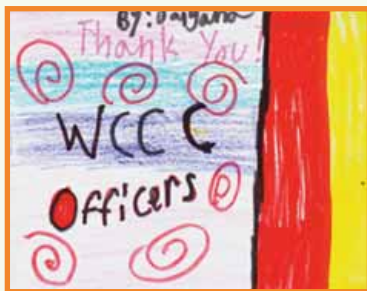

Thank you from Hanley International Academy - In the Mail

To the Wayne County Community College District Police Department,

On behalf of the administrative team and the staff at Hanley International Academy, I want to extend our gratitude to your department for coming out to read to our students during March is Reading Month. Not only did our students enjoy hearing you read some of our favorite stories, but they loved the opportunity to ask questions and learn about the hard work you do to keep our community safe. Our youngest learners loved learning about the responsibilities of being an officer, and our older students appreciated the extra knowledge you were able to share with them about dual enrollment classes, different types of position an officer can hold, and how you partner with the community to keep everyone safe.

Again thank you so much for taking time out of your day to join us. We thoroughly enjoyed having you here at Hanley International Academy.

Sincerely,
Jenna McGregor
Principal, Hanley International Academy

DR. RANDALL MILLER SHARES LEADERSHIP THOUGHTS WITH EXECUTIVE TEAM

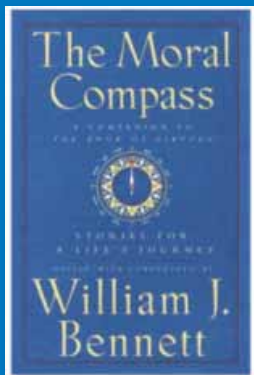

VALUES FORM A PERSON'S CHARACTER

Paul Harris, a Chicago attorney got an idea back in 1905 to invite professionals with diverse backgrounds to exchange ideas and form meaningful, lifelong friendships. Mr. Harris and his friends met regularly and wanted to have more meaning in their lives than just work, so they placed great importance in their meetings and relationships on values such as fairness, telling the truth, and demonstrating goodwill.

Mr. Harris and his friends understood that what they valued would guide their behavior. They all placed great value on their families and on being successful in their businesses. They also understood that exercising "universal values, such as love, compassion, justice, freedom, honesty, faithfulness, responsibility and the like are not really 'optional' any more than gravity," notes Dr. Henry Cloud in his book Integrity. The success they enjoyed by living upright lives led them to want to do more to serve others rather than just serving themselves.

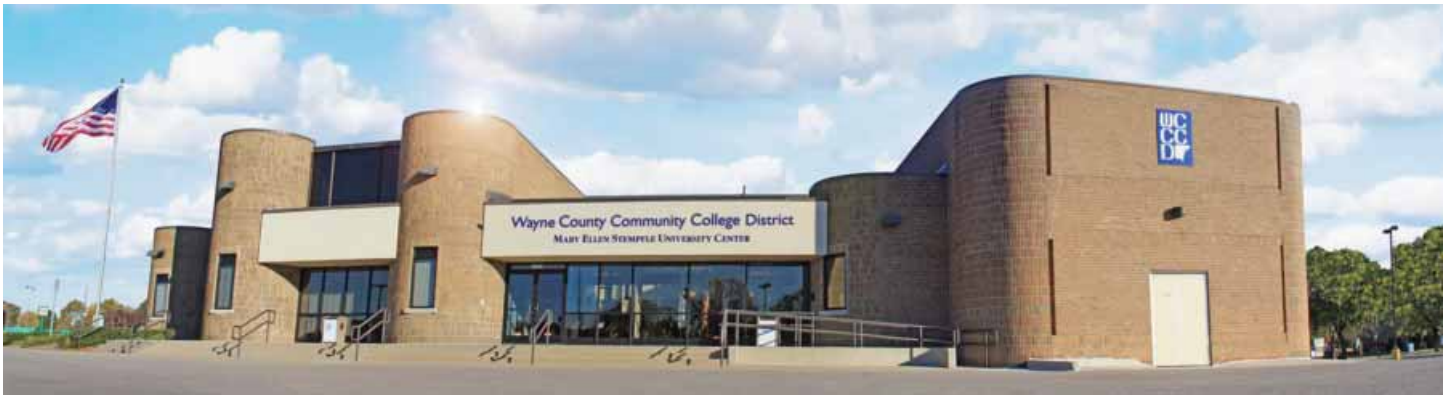

This notion of putting 'service above self' is central to many service clubs throughout the world today, and it also underscores the principle that when you "give up things for yourself, you end up getting more," and when you seek only to serve yourself, "you will lose even what you have."
